Name: Olivia Foulds

Year of Study: 3rd Year

Research Field: Human Computer Interactions

University of Study: University of Strathclyde

Short Biography: Having originally studied Psychology, I want to use my experience to help other PhD students feel like they are in a supportive environment during their studies.

Name: Tom Wallis

Year of Study: 4th Year

Research Field: Simulation & Modelling

University of Study: University of Glasgow

Short Biography: I'm a part-time PhD student who's just begun a lecturing position at the University of Glasgow. I think being in CS and being a researcher have something in common, which is that the people involved are the most interesting part! One day I hope to escape and do something creative.

Name: Noreen Grant

Year of Study: 3rd Year (Part Time)

Research Field: Digital health, mental health recovery, rural inequalities

University of Study: University of the Highlands & Islands

Short Biography: I'm 57 but a fairly new entrant to the academic world. I completed my honours degree (1st class) in combined Social Sciences in 2016 and began my PhD in 2017. I'm a single parent and have caring responsibilities for my young adult son and elderly parent with dementia. I'm also a recovering alcoholic and member of a 12 step recovery organisation. So far, I've come through a fair amount of challenges in trying to balance PhD life with my own and others' wellbeing and hope that I can offer a listening ear and perhaps support other people going through tough times.
